Candidate Sarah Schneider Calls for Transparency as Out-of-State PAC Money Floods San Clemente's District 4 Election

San Clemente, CA – Sarah Schneider, candidate for San Clemente City Council, is calling attention to a troubling influx of out-of-state money influencing the District 4 election. Recent negative mailers, funded by an out-of-state PAC called Point of Friction, are circulating misleading information about Schneider's campaign. This Virginia-based PAC, backed by large corporate donors, is attempting to influence the outcome of San Clemente's local election, raising serious concerns about the motives behind this funding.

"These mailers are full of misinformation, but the more concerning issue is who's paying for them," Schneider stated. "Why is an out-of-state PAC, with no connection to our community, so invested in shaping San Clemente's future?"

Schneider's focus throughout her campaign has been on representing the needs and values of San Clemente residents. As a mother of five and founder of the Southwest San Clemente Alliance, Schneider has demonstrated her commitment to her neighbors and to preserving San Clemente's unique character. She led her community in fighting back against large for-profit addiction businesses that purchased three homes in residential neighborhoods, proving her commitment to protecting San Clemente families and neighborhoods. This is the hands-on leadership Schneider promises to bring to the City Council.

"Unlike my opponent, who appears to be supported by out-of-state corporate PAC money, my campaign is backed by the people of San Clemente," said Schneider. "I'm running to protect our neighborhoods, keep our beaches healthy, and support our local small business economy. My commitment is to the people who live here, not to hidden agendas backed by out-of-state PACs."

As Election Day nears, Schneider urges voters to consider who is funding these negative attacks and why. "San Clemente deserves better," she stated. "Let's keep our city's future in the hands of people who understand and value this community. I am committed to standing up for our residents and protecting our city's character."
